

Posted by catohagen (31.29.32.150) on 27-Apr-2003 10:41:15

In Reply to Comment 94 (Senex)

>Read BBRV's posting again:

ehm...bbrv's posting is bollocks until anything is confirmed :)

But I think OS4 is not affected my this...OS4 was almost ready for a public demo at AmuGED(?) so my guess is that its being demoed at next show, the AmigaOne mainboard are selling well around too.

Reply to this comment | Top

New Amiga CEO : Comment 97 of 254

Posted by bbrv (Trusted user) on 27-Apr-2003 10:42:56

In Reply to Comment 77 (catohagen):

@all interested

In mid-March Gary Hare attended a CTIA Conference (Cellular Telecommunications & Internet Association) and met with an old friend and business associate of ours, David Traub. For example, David introduced me to the President of Capital Records in 1992 to negotiate the first interactive music video we did at ICTV. We used a Peter Gabriel song David has also known Gary for many years as well. Gary is former head of Fathom Pictures, a former Philips producer, and a pioneer in the interactive world. At the Conference Gary used business cards that clearly indicate that Gary Hare is Chairman and CEO of Amiga Inc. He has been active in the Valley for a couple of months now with this moniker. For us, that is "old news." Simple.

We are very interested in supporting Gary and the new Amiga Inc. This would include financial support. The potential for collaboration is significant.

The whole AmigaDE lawsuit was just a means to shut Bill McEwen up and force Amiga Inc. into a settlement that might include us obtaining the rights to the Amiga trademarks and the classic OS. Amiga Inc. had no reason to spread all the FUD they did officially about MorphOS, particularly after we tried so hard to help them in 2000 and 2001. McEwen's 1 September "we will shut you down" threat was just more talk and on about the same level as the coupon scam. We could not allow him to continue to do this and took action. It worked. He is gone.

Back to the lawsuit...the worst case for us would be enforcing our license agreement that would require Amiga Inc. to integrate DE for use in some way with the Pegasos which would then allow us to use the trademarks (as there are some that would prefer to call the Pegasos an Amiga). Again, no big deal...users/customers can/should have the choice to call their computer whatever they want and do whatever they want with it...;-)

As has been seen here and on other sites, we are interested in supporting as many operating systems as we can. We just provided a free board to the AROS team. We are even in discussions to set up a PayPal account to help AROS fund the development. There are many talented people involved in that project. We are very pleased to have the beginnings of a relationship with them.

If we do obtain the rights to the classic AmigaOS one way or the other we will even work with the OS4 development team. We always have said that some kind of collaboration would be better for all concerned!

Patience is a virtue, but the name of the game is perseverance...this is key to all success in life and business.

Happy Sunday!

Raquel and Bill

Reply to this comment | Top

New Amiga CEO : Comment 98 of 254

Posted by Senex (Trusted user) on 27-Apr-2003 10:46:29

In Reply to Comment 96 (catohagen):

Since BBRV is the only public source regarding this currently and since you based your comment on the thesis already that they might be right (since you accepted the possibility of a new CEO which has been brought up by BBRV only so far), I don't see why it wouldn't be appropriate for further speculation (i.e. answering your question who'd pay him) to refer to that very same and only source again.

Reply to this comment | Top