"Some one needs to make new Idea's, and draw new lines, or else we all might as well be in the stone age, good idea can even come from the most stupid man you can think of."

It is true that an expert often can't stand back and see new possibilities, but IMO an ignorant person is even less likely to have good ideas.

Who invented Tao's VP technology? An expert programmer who saw a problem and thought up a solution. Not someone who had read about the theory of programming but never done any. Certainly not somebody stupid.

fleecy's DE idea is one of a series of ideas for avoiding a full update of Amiga OS to modern hardware. First Amiga was going to be hosted on BeOS, then hosted on QNX, then on Linux, and finally on Intent. This is all to avoid having to code drivers.

Fortunately, the MorphOS, Hyperion and AROS teams finally went ahead and did (or are doing) the actual update that should have been started five or six years ago.

I agree with others, I don't know if the hoax is from fleecy on the community, or if the hoax is that this is written by fleecy to the community.

either way, its boring now.

dang, I've got to stop being so bored..
